CITY'S SKYLINE CONSTANTLY CHANGING; OLD BUILDINGS GIVEN AWAY TO NEW

TO REALIZE the transformation that El Paso is passing through in buildings and to get the whole thing in a proper perspective one need but go to the top of the Mills building and note the altered skyline. In every direction, save to the south, where lies Juarez, may be seen the color of new brick, fresh concrete, the skeleton work of new homes.

The business section is, however, the index for the city's growth. Upon San Antonio street the new $350,000 building of the Popular store has begun and gangs are working night and day. A short distance further up the street the concrete pillars for the new $500,000 courthouse building are beginning to poke their gray lengths above the foundation.

The concrete and red brick Mulligan warehouse, at Mills and Campbell street, is passing through the last stages of four story completion and gives a solidity to a section of the city, because of its interlacings of railways, has been more or less statu quo.

The brilliant frontage of the J. S. Lanier building stops the traveler up and down Stanton street.

Everywhere in the city is the sound of the hammer and the rasp of the saw. There is no element of the boom in any of the building—only a steady and a normal growth, emphasized perhaps by the usual building activity of spring.

Attention, Gas Consumers!

You will observe when you receive your bills this month that they are different and we would request you to read over carefully the instructions on the same. These instructions call attention to the fact that the bill is due 15 Days After the Date of Billing and not on the 15th day of March. The last day of discount for each person's bill will be shown in the upper right-hand corner of the bill.

The reason for making this change is, as has been stated before, to relieve the congestion which has been brought about by the great number of people coming in between the 1st and 15th, and in order that we might be able to give more time and attention to each and every one of our customers.

Is Your Title Perfect?

Every man answers this in the affirmative and believes his answer correct. But when the next lawyer examines it he finds that there are numerous objections. This will happen over and over again. But when the Stewart Title Guaranty Company approves it, it is the final approval, and your trouble ceases. Why overlook such an advantage?
